

Obama warns GOP on healthcare 'Now comes the hard part'

BY PETER SULLIVAN - 11/14/16 05:16 PM EST

34 SHARES

SHARE (34)

TWEET

PLU:

Just In...

John Lewis accepts National Book Award

IN THE KNOW — 2M 45S AGO

Detaining immigrant families was always wrong, and we're still doing it

THE ADMINISTRATION — 3M 1S AGO

Removing barriers for women in apprenticeships and trades

LABOR — 13M 2S AGO

Kaine rules out run for president in 2020

CAMPAIGN — 16M 31S AGO

Under Trump, will Republicans and Democrats swap identities?

NATIONAL PARTY NEWS — 18M 1S AGO

Jobless applications hit 43-year low

FINANCE — 23M 20S AGO

Roe v. Wade lawyer: Trump won't overturn abortion rights

HEALTHCARE — 23M 38S AGO

Intel chairman: Pentagon plagiarized Wikipedia in report to Congress

DEFENSE — 28M 8S AGO

VIEW ALL

President Obama said he thinks Republicans' efforts to repeal and replace ObamaCare will get harder now that they have the responsibility of governing.

At a press conference Monday, Obama noted that while repealing his signature law has long been a "holy grail" for Republicans, the GOP will have to contend with the real-world consequences such action would have for the 20 million people who gained health coverage under the law. In addition to winning the White House, the GOP also maintained its House and Senate majorities.

"It's one thing to characterize this thing as not working when it's just an abstraction, now suddenly you're in charge and you're gonna repeal it," Obama said. "OK, well what happens to those 20 million people who have health insurance? Are you going to just kick them off and suddenly they don't have health insurance?"

He pointed to other benefits of the law, such as slowing the growth of healthcare costs.

Obama acknowledged that the law could be repealed and replaced with something else. But what that replacement would be, he said, is key.

"My view is that if they can come up with something better, that actually works and a year or two after they've replaced the Affordable Care Act with their own plan, that 25 million people have health insurance and it's cheaper and better and running smoothly, I'll be the first one to say that's great, congratulations," Obama said.

"If, on the other hand, whatever they're proposing results in millions of people losing coverage and results in people who already have health insurance losing protections that were contained in the legislation, then we're gonna have a problem," he added.

Republicans have not yet specified the details of their replacement plan.

President-elect Donald Trump told The Wall Street Journal last week that he wanted to keep the law's protections for people with pre-existing conditions, a decision he said came after discussing the matter with Obama at their post-election White House meeting.

But it is unclear how Republicans would make that work if they repealed other parts of the law that interlock with that provision.

Speaker Paul Ryan (R-Wis.) told CNN on Sunday that the specifics of a replacement are still being worked out.

"You're asking me details about legislation that hasn't been written yet," Ryan said when asked if ObamaCare's requirement that birth control be available to women at no cost would remain.

In a sign of how difficult coming up with a specific replacement is, Republicans could repeal ObamaCare with a delay -- giving them two years, or some other period of time, to try to come up with an alternative.

But Obama warned that Republicans will pay a political price if they take coverage away from people, saying "the American people will respond."

"So I think on a lot of issues, what you're gonna see is: Now comes the hard part," Obama said. "Now is governance."

Related News

'Twilight' actress takes NSFW jab at Trump in new ad

Ellen DeGeneres on 2016: 'Things can still turn out to be OK'

WATCH: Law professor: Clinton and Trump face 'legal cloud' if elected

WATCH: Pelosi: Comey dashed Dems' chances to win House majority

by Taboola

TAGS DONALD TRUMP PAUL RYAN

SHARE (34)

TWEET

PLUS ONE

THE HILL 1625 K STREET, NW SUITE 900 WASHINGTON DC 20006 | 202-628-8500 TEL | 202-628-8503 FAX
THE CONTENTS OF THIS SITE ARE ©2016 CAPITOL HILL PUBLISHING CORP., A SUBSIDIARY OF NEWS COMMUNICATIONS, INC.